Kenworth has been custom-engineering trucks to pull the heaviest loads on earth for over 60 years. Great, huge loads—turbines, space ships, oil derricks. Over punishing terrain.

While you may never challenge 200 tons, even hauling your loader across town can be a real feat with the wrong truck. Meet the right truck! Kenworth T800. It's designed to cut your heavy loads down to size. With heavy-duty drive train components computer-analyzed for compatibility, engine options exceeding 400 horsepower, and a constant-section, custom-drilled frame that's designed to take it on or off the road.

The T800 stands as the heir to all the back-breaking, down-in-the-mud, axle-pounding, gut-busting experience Kenworth construction trucks have withstood the world over. That's why it comes standard with two very important qualities: Strength and durability.

But everything else on the T800 is a custom-engineered response to a unique operating environment. Yours. Your design choices include a comprehensive list of proven heavy-duty components: front axles up to 20,000 pounds, along with dual power steering, center front tow hitch, and a wide range of frame options in steel or aluminum, with or without inserts.

Those specifications are assembled with uncompromising quality. The result is uncompromising value.
